

Our Selves

We are based in Kefalonia, the largest and most charming of the Greek Ionian Islands, with crystal clear waters, sandy beaches and high green mountains. Ideal for swimming, fishing, sea and mountain sports.

The magnificent contrasts of scenery, the Greek sun and the local specialities along with the Robola wine have the power to keep your mood high and give you unforgettable moments.

With a modern team of well-trained staff and reliable collaborators, we are more than ready to satisfy the most demanding inquiry, anytime, any day at any port of the island you may be moored.

Even if the ship is anchored anywhere around the island, it is very easy to pay a visit by using our company's speedboat.

In addition, we can proportionally shape and work out, any of and all services, following the passengers' wish and/or your request, accordingly. Regarding refueling we cooperate directly with the largest oil companies and refineries, and that makes us the most punctual and competitive suppliers in quantity and pricing as well as in quality, On special occasions we can provide this service anywhere in Greece, on request.

Our ultimate service offered, is the Overall Exclusive Support. Managed and controlled by one of our office's specialized experts on 24h basis, whose duty is to be at any point, from entering to exiting ports, having organized everything prior to arrival, during the ship's itinerary in the Hellenic Seas.

Our Location

KEFALONIA

Kefalonia is the land of contrasts.

Crystal clear waters of Poros and Agia Efimia, as well as Sami port, east wise. The turquoise bay of Mytros, north west. On the west side of the island, Assos, a charming village built astride the isthmus of the peninsula of the same name, famous for its picturesque castle. You can also go up to the top of Mount Ainos (1.628 meters above the sea level) with its slopes covered with tall, cedar-like fir trees that grow nowhere else in the world.

The earthquake destroyed the original 16th century monastery of St. Gerasimos in 1953, except from its bell tower. Now a more recent small church lies where the original monastery was located and a bigger even more recent church has been built nearby, in byzantine style. There are also other two buildings around the church, one of which houses the nuns (it is a female monastery) and the other is a guesthouse. The small church is built above a cave that the patron Saint of Kefalonia himself built with his own bare hands. His unknowingly preserved body is kept in this small church.

The cave at Melissani is actually a partially covered subterranean lake. Whenever the sun is directly overhead, its rays strike the ultramarine water, shattering into a myriad of phantasmagoric colors.

Drogarati, on the other hand is known for its unusual stalactites.

In the area of Lassi, 1.5 kilometers from Argostoli, are the famous Katavavothres, (swallow-holes), a rare geological phenomenon. Here seawater enters openings in the rock and "disappears".

Of the old, immensely attractive city of Argostoli, the capital, which was also destroyed by the earthquake in 1953, very little remain; the arched bridge stretching across the lagoon and the obelisk at its centre, which commemorates the date of its construction.

Lixouri, Kefalonia's second largest town, has a peaceful atmosphere, a lovely 19th century mansion-museum, and vestiges of the ancient city of Pali.

The Monastery of Agios Andreas near the village of Peratata has a wonderful icons collection. Above the monastery looms the castle of St. George built by the Venetians in 1504. The view of fertile valley and its villages spreads out below the castle is splendid.

Fiskardo, the northernmost harbor in Kefalonia, has kept its traditional color. Lying opposite and very close to Ithaca is surrounded by a thick cypress glade.
